National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A weak cold front is expected to move south across northern England during Sunday afternoon, with the cloud breaking to allow some clear spells during the evening and overnight. This will lead to a frost and risk of ice, although due to the variability of the cloud cover some places will escape a frost. Ice is likely to form where surfaces have been left wet from rain or melting snow and some frost deposits are also likely to occur. The temperature will rise again later in the night across northern England as cloud increases.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 19:00 on Sun, 12th Feb 2012 until 09:00 on Mon, 13th Feb 2012

Ice is likely to form on untreated surfaces during the course of Sunday evening and overnight into Monday morning across parts of northern and eastern England, particularly where roads and pavements have been left wet from either afternoon rain and drizzle or melting snow. The public should be aware that extra care will be needed.
